BLAME IN FATAL
DEKALB MISHAP*Relatives of Victims Say Chicago Man Was at Fault

East Moline, Ill., June 7.—Relatives of the Christo family, which was practically wiped out in an automobile accident near DeKalb last Monday to-day took issue with the statement of H. B. Payne, Chicago, advertising executive, whose car struck the Cristo machine resulting in the death of Tony Christo, his two sons, and probable fatal injuries to his wife.

Fayne, who is recovering from minor injuries at his home in Winnetka, is reported to have said that Christo lost control of his machine because of the slippery condition of the pavement.

According to Giuseppe Posco, a brother of Mrs. Christo, and Frank Rossi, brother in law, both of Chicago; Agnes Marasoun, the East Moline girl who was with the Christos, and who was slightly hurt, stated that the Payne car was traveling at a speed of between 50 and 60 miles an hour and that it swung to the left side of the road to pass a machine ahead of it.

The coroner's jury will hear the story of the Marasoun girl when it is convened at DeKalb by Coroner Wilkinson on June 15, and the jury will decide which of the two versions of the accident are tenable.

Triple funeral services for Tony Christo and his two sons were held Friday while Mrs. Christo, the wife and mother is fighting for life in a hospital at DeKalb. She is slowly regaining consciousness but physicians and hospital attendants hold little hope for her recovery because of internal injuries she suffered in the accident.

Scott's Plea for Change of Venue to Supreme Court

Chicago, June 7.—(AP)—Russell Scott's conviction of murder and the hanging sentence, involving unprecedented procedure in Illinois, may go to the Illinois Supreme Court again in an effort to obtain a change of venue for his second sanity trial.

Superior Judge Marcus Kavanagh today indicated that he would deny the petition for a change of venue. He told Scott's counsel, William Scott Stewart, that he could prepare to go to a higher court.

Stewart after the hearing on the venue petition had been continued until Thursday, said he had virtually determined to petition the supreme court for a writ of mandamus to compel the venue change. The lawyer, however, did not allude to the case of Raymond Costello who was hanged after a sanity trial before Judge Kavanagh. The judge established a precedent in that case by appointing alienists to represent the court, in addition to state and defense alienists.

Scott, originally sentenced for the murder of Joseph Mauer, and then judged insane by a jury was recently returned from prison after state prison alienists had called him sane. A second jury must finally define his mental state.

Goltra Loses Case in Supreme Court

Washington, June 7.—(AP)—Edward F. Goltra, of St. Louis, lost in the Supreme Court today in his effort to retain four tow boats and nineteen barges leased to him by the government.

The tow boats and barges were leased to Goltra after the war with an option to buy, and have been the center of protracted litigation. The case was cancelled and the craft forcibly seized by officers of the war department on the ground that Goltra had failed to operate them, but he obtained an injunction from the federal district court at St. Louis and recovered possession.

The court of appeals reversed the decision, however, holding that the Secretary of War had authority to summarily cancel the lease without a hearing, and that the matter was one in which the courts had no right to interfere. It ordered, however, that the towboats and other leased property should remain in the possession of Goltra pending the decision of his appeal to the supreme court.

Lyman, a native of Lee Center and son of George Lyman, former editor of the Amboy News, died this morning at the John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md., where he was taken for treatment last week. W. H. Badger and Miss Lucy Badger of Dixon will leave tomorrow for Morgantown to attend the funeral services. It is probable the body will be taken to Amboy from Morgantown for interment in Prairie Rest cemetery.

TWO WELL KNOWN

FATAL ACCIDENTS*Ex-Congressman and a
Society Leader Met
Death Last Night

New York, June 7.—(AP)—Meyer London, the first socialist congressman from an eastern state, and Heyward Cutting, society man and explorer, were killed in week end automobile accidents in New York.

Mr. London who represented the 12th District from 1915 to 1919 and 1921 to 1923, died in a hospital last night of injury received when struck by a car which had swerved out of its course to avoid colliding with another machine. He was born in Russia 55 years ago, came to New York at the age of 20, and worked his way through law school.

Heyward Cutting, member of a prominent New York family, died of a fractured skull received in an accident on a Long Island road. He was with a party returning from a dance given Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and Crown Princess Louise of Sweden. He and two companions who were slightly injured, were found by Countess Salm, the former Millicent Rogers. She went with Mr. Cutting to the hospital, where he died without regaining consciousness.

Chicago, June 7.—(AP)—A definite nationwide agreement as to what agencies shall tax automobile owners and what special taxes shall be used for is the greatest need of the motoring public, President Thomas P. Henry of the American Automobile Association, said today at the opening of that body's annual convention.

Only by organizing, Henry said, can motorists free themselves of the top-heavy maze of restrictions and regulations which are abetting confusion on the highways.

In its two day session, the convention will discuss motor legislation, taxation, safety work and highway construction. Compulsory automobile liability insurance probably will be condemned, delegates said.

Officers will be elected tomorrow by the board of directors.

COMMITTEE HOLDS
COOLIDGE ORDER
OUTLINED POLICY*Was Legally Right, in the Opinion of Members of Sub-Committee

Washington, June 7.—(AP)—President Coolidge, in issuing his order authorizing the employment of state officers as prohibition enforcement agents was "entirely within his rights and guilty of no infraction of the constitution or the law, either expressed or implied," said the majority report of a judicial sub-committee today to the entire committee.

In studying the question, the sub-committee acted under a senate resolution of which Senator King, democrat of Utah, was the author. That Senator, as one of the sub-committee of five submitted minority views holding that the order was unauthorized and improper.

The sub-committee majority held that what the President issued was not an "order," but a mere expression of policy. It stated in its report that the order really "accomplished nothing," since the Attorney General and the internal revenue commissioner had authority to make such appointments before the order was issued.

Refraining from expressing any opinion as to the wisdom of the policy of so employing state officers, the sub-committee majority said:

"Nothing said here is to be construed as an expression of either approval or disapproval of the policy evidenced by the notice of order of the President which has been the subject of discussion.

"The committee has deemed itself restricted in the inquiry by the resolution under which it has proceeded to the sole question of whether the President acted in the premises without authority or in violation of the constitution, in any of its provisions, expressed or implied."

On the latter proposition, Supreme Court decisions and executive orders of similar import to that issued by President Coolidge were cited to support the conclusion of the sub-committee.

President Roosevelt issued an order in 1907 authorizing forestry officials to accept appointments in the forestry service of the state and President Wilson issued two orders, one authorizing officers of the reclamation service to accept positions under state game wardens and the other authorizing treasury officers to accept appointments to state, county or municipal councils of defense.

DIXON BALL TEAM WINS ITS FIRST GAME OF SEASON*McCoy's Colts Staged a Triple Play in Winning at Harmon

Dixon at last has a ball team, and judging from its first performance, the organization promises to attract no small amount of attention this season in games with surrounding cities. Dr. Henry James McCoy has been unanimously selected to serve the team as business and financial manager and he is already booking games for the summer season.

The team, which will be known as McCoy's Dixon Colts, made its initial appearance at Harmon yesterday afternoon and in a sensational game, came through on the long end of the 16 to 6 score. The contest was replete with sensational plays, the foremost of which was a triple. D. C. Austin stabled a hard hit line drive with one hand in center field, retiring the hitter, tossing to Gorham at second, who retired a runner going to third, and Gorham shot the ball over to "Doc" Hess at first, who retired a runner who had started to second.

Two double plays, Vaughan to Gorham to Hess, and Austin to Hess, were also features of the game. Milt Vaughan and D. C. Austin were the hard hitters for the Colts and Louis Long was the iron man with the stick for Harmon. Next Sunday the Colts are scheduled for a game at Walnut.

Troublesome Conflict of Mosul Has Been Settled

Geneva, June 7.—(AP)—Sir Austin Chamberlain today cheered up the League of Nations spirit, which was flagging because of what was regarded as the Spanish and Brazilian threats of separation, by announcing officially that the long standing Mosul conflict had been settled. He told the council that, in consonance with its previous request that every possible means be employed to attain an amicable solution of the dispute, a Turco-British agreement was signed yesterday.

He explained that Iraq, which is under British mandate, ceded by the new treaty a small strip of territory to Turkey, but that this did not prejudice Iraq's interests. The parties decided to delimit the frontier on the spot under the presidency of a chairman to be chosen by the President of Switzerland.

A sensation was caused at the opening public meeting of the fortieth session of the council today when it was seen that Afranio Mello Franco, the Brazilian representative, was not present.

The league secretary Gen Sir Eric Drummond, announced that he had received a letter from Senhor Mello Franco stating that illness prevented his attending. As no other member of the Brazilian delegation was substituted, however, Mello Franco's illness was generally interpreted as being of a diplomatic nature.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF TWO MEN WHO FELL FROM LIFT IN CAISSON

Chicago, June 7.—(AP)—Two workmen employed in excavating at the bottom of a 115 foot caisson started up from the shaft in a bucket suspended by a rope.

What happened in the rude lift as the men made their upward voyage yesterday will never be known, but ten feet below the surface their comrades on the ground sensed that the bucket was empty. A workman lowered to the bottom of the pit found Michael McNaughton dead, and Thomas Loftis, his companion, so badly injured that he soon died.

The belief of fellow workmen that the two had an altercation in their narrow elevator could not be substantiated by police, nor could any cause be found for a possible disagreement between them. Investigators determined, however, that something caused one or both men to lose his grip on the rope which held the bucket upright, causing it to tip and send them both to death.

The men were working on addition to the Furniture Mart, a few feet from the Lake Michigan shore.

Contributions for This Page Welcomed

Contributions to the society column are desired by the Telegraph, and all persons having town or family friends to visit them are requested to telephone the society editor at phone No. 5. Accounts of parties, dances, marriages and announcements of engagements also are desired. If items are mailed to the office they must bear the signature and address of the sender, and for publication, but as evidence of good faith. Write plainly, on one side of the page only.

For society editor, call 5, Telegraph. As a rule, items which are held over for several days before reaching this office will not be used, for the news is only news at the time it occurs.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by Allene Sumner

First Lady and Lace

A body of foreign women graduates of an Americanization class journey to the White House says the news, bearing a spread of handmade lace to the First Lady. The lace may be very beautiful, again it may be one of these atrocious of punchwork, tatting, crochet, Rose of Sharon patchwork or the Rising Sun pattern.

Beautiful or atrocious, it reminds us of the multitude of gifts which the two beset occupants of the White House must be called upon to receive. Cans of maple syrup from this state and that, beds in which presidents breathed their last, first seasonal blooms from state flowers, pigs raised by Better Pig Clubs, pictures of Better Baby prize winners.

We hear little of the White House attic but it must be a most interesting nook!

Being a Beauty

"That colors become me most?" is a question received by Cynthia Grey more frequently, perhaps, than any other. One general answer might be, according to costume authorities, "study your hair and eyes, match and contrast." The best rule is to bring out color of eyes more than any other feature. If you have bright brown or black eyes, dark hair and high coloring, wear warm flaming colors, yellow, orange, red, pink, etc. If your eyes are blue-grey wear cool shades of blue and blue and grey.

The Calling Cards

Time was when calls and calling cards had a dignity and seriousness of position not accorded them in this hurry-up world when invitations to the most formal affairs are apt to be telephoned, and social letters written by typewriter. Simpler rules prevail about the calling card than in the old days when etiquette decreed a certain number of cards for various occasions, with corners turned variously to denote different things. One card suffices for any occasion now, and corners are NEVER turned down.

Lace Shower

Lace lends itself to bridal showers. Write invitations on round lace paper doilies. Decorate with maiden hair fern on lace corsage plates. Have table favors of small corsages on lace holders, decorate with Queen Anne's lace and have shower gifts in lace or wrapped in lace doilies.

Wives "Easy to Live With"

Qualities in a wife which makes her "easy to live with," as told by husbands to Montayne Perry, author, include "knowing when and when not to ask a man to do little chores around the house," "how to stretch the money," "taking time off to play," "a sense of proportion—not making a life tragedy out of a steak spoiled because a man doesn't get home on time to dinner."

He'll Will's Tennis Frock

It is not too much to assume that a girl who plays tennis for championships as does Helen Wills, would also be the girl who knows what a tennis player should wear for comfort and style. Helen Wills' ideal tennis dress is a sleeveless, low V-necked jumper overblouse of white broadcloth or crepe, worn with a color-striped white skirt, pleated, very short and very full.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

Who spends the most for clothes in your family—papa or mama?

The average husband spends more for clothes than the average wife, says the U. S. Department of Labor, who has made an annual budget for the average American wife.

This budget totals $148.65. That's for a year, not a month!

The budget allows only one hat a year. The hat costs $4.42, according to this governmental budget. The wool coat costs $23.61.

But, in fine deference to the modern woman's demand for silken lingerie, the budget permits one silk vest, one silk chemise, one silk nightgown, and one silk kimono.

One pair of silk stockings at $1.22!

One union suit and the woolen undershirt (shades of our forefathers) are enumerated in this illuminating budget!

But I did not especially set forth to quibble about either the amount of the budget or the various items permitted.

The thing which really intrigued me was the belated governmental recognition that husband spends more money for his clothes than a woman!

This is only what every wife, every woman, has known for so these long and weary years!

Yes, yes, we know all the old arguments! Papa must dress well in his work. It's a matter of business. A man out in the world must look successful in order to be successful.

Some truth in this theory, of course. But also there's a lot of bunk in it. The truth of the matter is that men do not have, never have had, and never will have the economy instinct.

If women aren't born with it, and I think they are, they are forced to acquire it. A wife and mother is in closer contact with the needs of her home and family than is the husband. She knows the million demands made upon the family wallet.

Besides, she cares more. No one will deny that the spirit of unselfish love and devotion to those about her is much stronger in women than men.

Few fathers would sacrifice and economize as do mothers even if the acute need for such sacrifice and economy were brought home to them.

War Mothers in Pleasant Meeting

Friday, June 4th, the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Washington Miller was the scene of a very enjoyable meeting of the Lee county chapter of American War Mothers. A company of fifty War Mothers and friends gathered at the Miller home for the annual picnic. A bountiful dinner was served and much enjoyed by all present.

The home was beautifully decorated with flowers of the season.

There being no sewing to be done, a few were occupied with fancy work, and the time until two-thirty was spent in social chat.

The meeting proper was called to order by War Mother Strub and with Mrs. Nettie Cookley at the piano America and one verse of the Star Spangled Banner, was sung. The Twenty-third Psalm was repeated in unison and then the business of the order was transacted.

The treasurer's and secretary's report was accepted as read.

Communications were read and several discussions took place, especially the using of the American Flag as a decoration in any other than an upright position, the member reporting that on Decoration day she saw the radiators of several automobiles with the flag draped over them, instead of in the proper position. It seems as though some people do not read or pay any attention to flag rules and regulations. (Editor's Note—The use of the flag in this regard is done through thoughtlessness and not through any disrespect, but as our correspondent indicates, rules governing the flag should be generally well known.)

Mrs. Bertha Morgan, Mrs. Mary Walker and Mrs. Nettie Cookley, were appointed as the committee to purchase several flags to be presented in the near future to schools that do not have them.

Mrs. Walker made the motion to have a doughnut sale in the near future which was carried.

Mrs. Strub asked the visitors for remarks, and several good suggestions were made. Mother Strub also told the order at this time that she was the first graduate at the Walnut school thirty-six years ago June 4th and that she had been asked to deliver the welcoming address at Walnut this year. The order having no other business adjourned to meet in Legion hall June 18th. All left for home after thanking Mrs. Miller and daughter for the hospitality so graciously extended by them to the order and guests. Several group pictures were taken by Mrs. Miller during the afternoon.

Entertained Rebekahs Saturday in Fulton

Eleven lodges of District No. 8, Rebekah Assembly, I. O. O. F., were entertained by Leota Rebekah Lodge No. 326 of Fulton in annual session on Saturday. The meetings were held in the coliseum, where the exemplification of the ceremonies of the order were given during the day by the different lodges.

The Rock Falls lodge put on the memorial work in the afternoon and in the evening the Fulton staff conferred the degree on two candidates. The State Assembly officers present were Emma F. Turner of Chicago, treasurer; Fern L. Webster of Chicago, junior past president; Luella McCoal of Springfield, vice president; Emma K. Robbins of Dixon, warden; Mae E. Crowell of Rockford, secretary; Grace A. Henry of Sandwich, chief examiner.

EVERYTHING IS READY FOR Y. M. C. A. BOYS CAMP

Will Leave Tuesday at 1:15 P. M. for Big Time in Open

This morning, bright and early, three cars and a heavily loaded truck left the "Y" for Camp Yomechas and all day today the advance party of twelve of the leaders has been busy putting up tents and getting the camp in shape for the main party to arrive tomorrow. C. M. Anderson arrived from Kankakee Saturday night and is in charge of the advance party. So many boys have signed up that it has been decided to increase the number of Tribes from four to seven. This necessitated additional leadership and camp equipment but everything has been secured that is necessary for the comfort of the campers.

The orders as issued for tomorrow are for every boy to have all of his personal equipment at the Y. M. C. A. not later than 9:30. Trucks will be on hand at that time and everything will be sent out. All boys will assemble at 10:30 at the "Y" for the special Yomechas performance at the Dixon Theater of "Behind the Front."

THE SEWING MACHINE ARGUMENT.

In the days when it was becoming popular to assail the Dingley tariff and its beneficiaries and big business in general, the argument was brought forth that a certain well known sewing machine was being sold in South America or Europe at a figure for below what was being charged the people in this country. Similar reports were made with reference to typewriters and some kinds of farm machinery.

It was a little disconcerting to the manufacturers. It was disconcerting also to the defenders of the tariff, who were interested in its only as a means to general prosperity. The answer to it was not ready offhand. Big business was under fire at various angles, and it did not desire to expose itself recklessly.

Finally the explanation was offered that the people of the United States demanded the latest models and that it was necessary to unload to a less up-to-date trade the overproduction of out-of-date articles. There was enough truth about the assertions to permit their use as an answer.

Since the public has heard more about theories of mass production, about keeping the factory organizations intact when the domestic demand is light, it has been more safe to let the marketing problems sift through to the consumer. The labor that is concerned in continuous factory production has some understanding of the situation, and it is not stampeded when it discovers that something has been sold cheaper abroad than in the United States, providing it was made in the United States and the American scale of labor was paid in the factory.

We have learned that the American consumption of an article may be less than factory capacity; that when that demand is met, either the factory must close or a market of some kind must be found for the product issuing during the remainder of the year or of the season; that if the factory is closed, the wages stop; that if wages stop, the American demand is reduced and the whole thing moves in a circle. If the price is standardized in this country, wages can be standardized on that basis. If the factory manufactures a surplus, it must dump it somewhere on the face of the earth at whatever price it can get in competition with cheaper labor. Some of our industries are able to go out and meet world competition, while others can not.

Instead of regarding the plan of marketing more cheaply abroad as a base trick upon the people of the United States, we have accepted the business as sound.

The farmers have so far accepted that plan as sound that they are asking the congress to aid them in putting together an organization that will work in the same manner for them. The difference in opinion seems to hinge upon whether the farmer should perfect such an organization by himself or whether the government should aid to the extent of furnishing a board that should fix the home price, based upon the tariff and the transportation charges, two fixed items. President Coolidge and Secretary Jardine have taken the position that the price, if fixed, should be regulated by the farm organizations and not by a public body. The farm leaders of the west hold that an official body should be furnished to make the schedules upon certain basic agricultural products.

It is the theory of the farmers then that the United States demand shall be determined and that quantity shall be separated and shall be marketed as a tariff protected product. The balance shall be exported at the world price. The similarity between this and the plan of operation of protected manufacturer may be seen. As an American made and tariff protected typewriter may be sold at the standardized price of $100, the protected corn may be sold at $1 a bushel. As the American made typewriter surplus may be dumped abroad at a competing price of $60, the surplus corn may be dumped upon foreign markets at 40 cents a bushel.

The farmer will apportion the loss on the surplus, and he believes that his profits on the American market will make up the difference. On the contrary, if he is not able to separate his surplus from the domestic demand, that whole production goes upon the market at the world price, or 40 cents a bushel.

That, in short, is the farmer's proposal to congress.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

No. 7—THE QUEER CITY OF ANY PLACE AT ALL

"Oho! What a funny pair of bugs!" said an enormous voice.

Nancy and Nick did not remember leaving the tiny car that rolled them along through Drowsy Land, but suddenly they were standing right on their feet in a big city. The pink ticket truck had rolled itself up with a snap and jumped back into Nick's pocket.

"What place is this, do you suppose?" said Nancy, looking around at the buildings, which were, if possible, queerer than those of Shanty-Town. The ticket truck stuck its head out of Nick's pocket again and looked at them with its round pink eyes. "This is called 'Any Place At All,'" it said, and then went back to its pocket.

"Oho, ho! Any Place At All!" cried Nick. "Then I suppose anything at all may happen to us, don't you think so, Nancy? I wonder what—" "I don't know exactly how he was going to finish his sentence, for suddenly a hand as large as a room whisked the Twins off their feet and before they could say 'boo' although it probably never entered their heads to say that they found themselves looking into a pair of eyes as large as plates.

"Oho! What a funny pair of bugs!" said an enormous voice. "I never saw such funny bugs before. Look, Mama!"

"It's a giant boy!" shouted Nick to Nancy, for the giant boy had started to laugh and it sounded like thunder. "It's a giant boy who's got us. Let's jump."

But when they looked down at the ground it seemed like a million miles, for the giant boy was as tall as a church.

"Don't wiggle so," roared the giant boy. "If you do I'll squeeze you."

With that he took Nick between one finger and thumb and Nancy between the other finger and thumb and held them more firmly. He roared like a lion, but not a very hard, but a queer thing happened. Nick felt his head going down and his feet coming up. Nearer and nearer they came toward each other until suddenly he was only three inches high. And looking over at Nancy he discovered that she had done exactly the same thing. She was only three inches high, too.

"I was right," thought Nick. "Most anything at all can happen to you here and I guess one thing has happened already. We look like Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb."

Suddenly Nick had an idea, and at the same time Nancy had the same idea. And I guess, if you had been held tightly between a giant boy's finger and thumb and squeezed until you were only three inches high, you'd have had the same idea, too. They pinched him! The Twins pinched the giant boy.

"With a horrible yell the giant boy flung the Twins away as hard as he could. 'They're bees!' he cried. 'Or wasps! Or hornets! Oh, Mama, I'm killed!'"

"I don't know what Mrs. Giant did for her little boy. Most likely she put on soda or unguentine, but anyway our story isn't about him. We must follow the Twins.

The Twins kept falling and falling and falling, down through a million miles of space, it seemed, and at last they landed softly on the ground. But wonders had not ceased. For both of them had melted on the way and were now as flat as rain-drops. They were as large around as wash-tubs, but as flat as fried eggs or wheat cakes. They felt very queer, but not at all uncomfortable. "Now who is going to scrape us up?" said Nick to Nancy.

PLAY SAFE

When yer feelin' kinda groggy, and yer pep begins to droop, an' the path ya tread is soggy, an' ya just don't give a hoop, you had better pay attention to yer system. Lissen here, you will pardon if I mention that there's somethin' outa gear.

It ain't natural for a fella to go sluffin' through the day, and it ain't because he's yella, 'cause most men er not that way. If, in anything yer doin', it is tough to go along, Watch yer step. There's somethin' brewin' an' that somethin's frankly wrong.

Now and then we all get lazy. Feel like loafin' as we please, but when every odd's day—well, yer fluffin' with disease. Maybe over work has done it. Too much toil and little play. When a fella's once begun, comes the time when he must play.

After all, the road to travel is the one to go-between. Mix your work with play—unravel brain that might grow over-keen. Underdoing, overdoing, always at your own expense. Breakdown is the thing that's brewin'.

Her Own Way A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY A MISTAKE

"I cannot come to dinner tonight, Mr. Robinson," I said glibly, for he had asked me with an air that made me realize that he did not think I could possibly refuse him. "I have an engagement."

The man bent toward me: "With Mr. Hathaway?" he murmured, and his voice and expression implied anything that I might make of it.

I smiled inwardly as I bowed my head, knowing that the man before me thought I was going with Mr. Hathaway, Senior, instead of Jerry.

I let him think so, not realizing that I would have reason to regret it some time later.

"Perhaps you will go with me some other evening," he suggested.

"Perhaps."

"You certainly know how to do it," he said softly as he moved away.

"Do what?" I asked innocently.

"You know how to lead a man on, my dear. No wonder Hathaway is in love with you."

I felt the eyes of all the girls upon me as I moved away from the end of the counter where I had been talking with Mr. Robinson. The glance of one of them, who had charge of the hosiery department right across from me, seemed particularly malignant. It looked could have scared I would have been blustered.

"Look at Sarah Smith," whispered Angie Horton as she took down some boxes of handkerchiefs behind me. "How she does hate you."

"Why should she hate me?" I asked quietly, as she went past to her customer.

"Because the boss has been rather nice to her lately and I think she had an idea she was going to be Miss Cavanaugh's successor," explained Angie. "But you see I called the turn. You're elected, my dear. You're elected."

I could not answer back for the pretty girl who had bought the handkerchiefs of me in the morning was standing on the other side of the counter in front of me.

This time she was embarrassed and blushing. For the life of me I could see no reason.

"I've got to have another dozen of those handkerchiefs," she said.

"Have you? I'm glad. That means business for me, you know."

"You see I didn't give them to Dad after all," she confided. "I gave them to someone else."

I smiled at her and said nothing. In fact I opened my mouth to say

REVERSES GIVEN LEADERS TIGHTEN NATIONAL SCRAP

First Division Clubs in Both Leagues in Enemy Territory

With the resumption of inter-sectional combats for the second time this season completely underway, first division clubs in the major leagues are found with few exceptions in crucial battles on foreign diamonds.

Burling Grimes stopped the world champion Pirates in their initial fray of the western invasion as Brooklyn won, 3-0. Babe Herman's double with two on base enabled the Robins to score twice in the last inning.

The Giants buried the Cubs under a 15-3 score in the only other scheduled contest in the National. Long George Kelly, Snyder and Hartnett banged for the circuit. The Giants have recalled Fay Thomas, a right handed pitcher, from Toledo.

Brooklyn now commands fourth place in the standing, but is a single point in front of the Giants and Cardinals, who are in a tie for fifth place.

Yankees Even Series
The Yankees evened up in their series with the Indians by taking a 6-5 decision before 55,000 fans, the largest crowd at the Cleveland ball park this season. The game was ended after the seventh inning on account of rain.

Braxton, filling the gap as relief hurler, stopped the Indians after Hoyt was driven from the box.

The fans booed Cleveland pitchers as they walked Babe Ruth, who received three passes.

The Red Sox conquered the White Sox, 4-3, in a home run by Todd in the eighth deciding the contest. Boston nipped an eighth inning rally by Chicago with a triple play.

The Browns shut out the Athletics, 2-0. Van Gilder holding the invaders to three safeties, while his mates tallied nine hits off Gray and Pate.

The arrival of the Pittsburgh Nationals in New York brought forth a rumor of a three cornered trade, whereby Grantham and Eddie Moore are to go to the Giants. The New York club in turn would send Bill Terry to Boston and the Braves would send Burrows to the Pirates, according to the reports.

Sidelights

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Chicago Cubs, trounced by the Giants, lost their fourth straight and the sixth of their last eight games. Rumors of pending trades are afoot and the team's supporters wear ominous frowns. And yet McCarthy's men are but three games and a half back of the league-leading Cincinnati Reds.

The rejuvenation of the St. Louis Browns has extended to Elam Van Gilder, who pitched a three hit game for Sisler's men yesterday and knocked in one of the runs which gave his mates victory.

Joe Aldridge held Brooklyn to four hits, and Fewster, Robin second baseman, made two errors, despite which the world champion Pirates took a trimming.

Bill Hunnefeld, at short for the White Sox, had a chance to make a hero of himself before a home crowd. He came up in the last half of the fifth with Boston leading, the bases full and two out—and he grounded out.

Boston made a triple play against the Sox, which, with Todd's homer gave the Red Sox a victory despite the fact that they got but six hits from Blankenship—less than half what the Sox collected.

Second division clubs of the American loop are getting a chance to improve their status en masse. The four first division teams are engaged in the present series against the occupants of the second column in the percentages.

Only five games separate the first place Reds from the sixth place Cardinals in the National League, while in the American the second place Philadelphia's are only three and a half games ahead of the sixth place Indians.

"OUR HELEN" TO LEAVE HER BED BY NEXT SUNDAY

But She'll Not be Able to Play in Tourney at Wimbledon

Paris, June 7—(AP)—Miss Helen Wills, American lawn tennis champion, who underwent an operation for appendicitis on Friday night, will leave the hospital next Sunday, her mother said today. Miss Wills had a comfortable night and her condition was satisfactory this morning, but she will not be allowed to receive visitors before Wednesday.

Mrs. Wills says her daughter probably will go to the Wimbledon tournament in England as a spectator, but that no definite plans will be made until her release from the hospital.

She probably will stay in Paris for two weeks after that date.

Her doctor says she can play tennis within a month, and her participation in the Forest Hills tournament is regarded as certain.

It is learned here that Miss Elizabeth Ryan will take Miss Helen Wills' place as Vincent Richards' partner in the mixed tennis doubles at Wimbledon. This necessitates further readjustment of the American team. Miss

CHAS. WALGREEN, FORMER DIXONITE, HAS MADE SUCCESS

Growth of Big Business is Due Largely to Newspaper Advertising

The success Charles R. Walgreen, a former Dixon boy and brother of Mrs. F. X. Newcomer of this city, has made in his chain of Chicago drug stores through newspaper advertising, was made the theme of a full page advertisement in the Chicago Tribune recently, in which it said:

Ten years ago Charles R. Walgreen had a few neighborhood drug stores in Chicago. They prospered and the number of them grew. The volume per store increased, too. But the growth was too slow. There was too much resistance to expansion, and Mr. Walgreen decided to advertise.

In spite of advice that advertising in Chicago newspapers meant business suicide for neighborhood stores because of the expense, Mr. Walgreen began about four years ago to buy space. The sales increase was tremendous.

BROKEN HEARTS of HOLLYWOOD

BY EDWARD CLARK

Copyrighted by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"BROKEN HEARTS OF HOLLYWOOD" with Louise Dresser is a Warner picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Mutually attracted, beautiful Betsy Terwilliger and handsome Hal Chutney arrive in Hollywood as prize winners of newspaper contests for movie tryouts. Marshall, reputed to be responsible for many of the "broken hearts of Hollywood," takes an interest in Betsy. Hal and Betsy are depressed and amazed by the number of people seeking work. Movie oldtimers see a mysterious resemblance in Betsy to someone they cannot remember. Hal dresses a cowboy part, while Betsy is handed a scanty one-piece bathing suit to don.

She heard Hal, and turned an appealing look at him.
"Oh, Hal—I just can't!" she said tearfully.
Hal, too, was mortified. His cheeks flamed for Betsy's sake. "There must be some mistake," he said, "I don't know who you are."
Both looked pleadingly at the wardrobe woman. They saw a gray-haired person, whose obviously once beautiful face had been subjected by trouble to that process which sweetens as it furrows, when the heart is good. She had been quietly appraising Betsy in particular, and Hal in passing, and now smiled.
"Green at the game, aren't you, dearie?" Then, without waiting for the answer which she knew anyway, she went on, "I've seen many a one blush like you when first drawing an assignment like this, and in two months be willing to wear anything—or nothing. I hope it won't be that way with you, for somehow you look—different. You remind me a woman who used to play leads when I did, fifteen years back."
She was aware of the incredulous look in their eyes, and laughed: "Oh, I guess it is hard to believe that I was a star once. But I was. Only I didn't have the right balance—and advice. And Hollywood—got me. That's why I'm always eager to help and advise those new girls who don't look as though they'll tell me to mind my own business. Say, what was your mother's name?" There was a faraway look in the wardrobe woman's faded eyes, the light of remote recollection struggling to grasp an elusive certainty.

"My name is Betsy Ann Terwilliger. I never heard my mother's maiden name. She died when I was a baby. Father died some years ago."
"Oh, I'm sorry, Terwilliger!" She tried and tried, but the memory would not resolve out of the shaded past. So she leaned forward across the counter and patted Betsy's cheek with fingers that, despite years of hard work, were still slender and velvety.
"Don't you worry about wearing this bathing suit. You'll be O. K. No one will bother you, if you don't invite them to. You can wear a bathrobe up to the time they start to shoot. You'll find, dearie, that the path to success in this game is blocked by worse things than one-piece bathing suits, but if you have a talent and can keep your feet on bottom and your head on top, you will succeed."
She came out from behind her cage and, at the yard door, summoned a girl already in costume: "Pearl, you know the ropes here. Show this child up to Number 20. Then to Betsy. You can wait in the dressing room, honey, until you're called."
"And," broke in Hal with a grin, "while you're about it, Miss, will you please point out Number 9 to me?"
The extra girl smiled vivaciously from one to the other, and said, "Sure thing. Let's go."
The wardrobe woman took hold of Betsy's hand and gave it a final pat. "Remember, dearie, if you ever want any advice or help come down here to Mother Jobyna Fredricks." Then this woman, to whom all the scandals and secrets of Studioiland's past were even more familiar than the present, stood in the doorway and stared after Betsy with mystified, marvelling eyes. "Great Heavens," she breathed. "Could it be possible? I hope—I hope—it isn't!"

CHAPTER VI.
When the blonde extra girl known as Pearl pointed out to Hal the way to Dressing Room Number 9 he took leave of Betsy, after they had agreed to look one another up at the end of the day's work and journey home together. This was the first time since their meeting at Centipede, in the lovely Valley, that either was to be without the friendly encouragement of the other's presence during the day-time. As they parted, each endeavored to hide misgivings under affected cheerfulness.

"Today is the day a new star will brighten up this old studio, and I don't mean maybe—when you walk onto the scene!" flattered Hal grandiosely.
"I'm afraid—I'll be too awkward and timid," deprecated Betsy, thinking of the flimsy one-piece bathing suit. Then she changed her tone to declare loyalty. "But you'll show them what a good-looking cowboy really is!"

"I'm not so sure," muttered Hal dubiously, looking at the trappings of horsemanship in his hands, seeing I've never ridden a horse in my life!"

"Hey, Valentino and Negri, can this mutual admiration society and get a wiggle on. I agreed to show you to the dressing rooms, not to conduct an all day tour. I gotta get back pronto—they're getting ready to shoot my bunch."

Betsy apologetically hurried along with Pearl, while Hal strode to and fro, entered the grey door that was numbered with a large white 9. He was quite unprepared for the crowded, animated scene that met his eyes. The long room—lined on three sides and bisected down the center by continuous tables, over which, at regular intervals, small individual mirrors were hung, and before which rough benches were set—was densely populated with a lusty crew of genuine cowboys.

An undersized and perspiring second assistant director stood near the door bawling hurry instructions, to which the rough-necks were paying not the slightest heed. There were perhaps two dozen of the punchers, in various stages of undress from B. V. D.'s to full costume—a jostling, sturdy, devil-may-care lot whose ribaldry resounded above the dust of "squeaky" make-up powder and the smell of grease paint and creams and all the musty litter of the dressing tables.

Hal, who stood open-mouthed just inside the door, attracted no more attention in that steaming din than another raindrop in a water barrel. Only the overworked assistant director gave him more than a casual glance.

"Who the heck are you?" he demanded wearily.
Hal struggled to remember his dignity and importance as a com test winner, but somehow this little man's eyes had an absurd power of reducing one to insignificance.

"I'm Hal Chutney, and I'm going to be an actor here. Will you kindly direct me to my dressing room?"

He handed his slip to the assistant, glanced at it and then at Hal as one might at a museum exhibit from the Moon, smiling ever so faintly.
"So you're going to be an actor, eh? Well, you dress right here, buddy, and get a move on or you'll be out of luck."
"Here!" gasped Hal, looking in vain for a vacant space before the dressing mirrors. "Why, I thought—I thought—Some inner voice cautioned me to refrain from revealing to this obscenely blinking little man that he had expected a private dressing room. But assistant directors have an uncanny flair for reading minds."

"You thought, of course, that you were going to share Mr. Skinner's star dressing room, and have a valet peel off your socks and comb your chaps. Any snap out of it, greenhorn, and find a place at one of those tables."

For assistant directors are one of the only class of people that Abraham Lincoln did not catalogue in his famous utterance about "fooling people"; they are the few people whom you can never fool at any time. And this assistant knew the whole story without a word of explanation from Hal—another contest winner sent in by the office. Another dub to crowd out a regular guy. But the assistant was an old stager; his not to reason why, his but to slave and sigh.

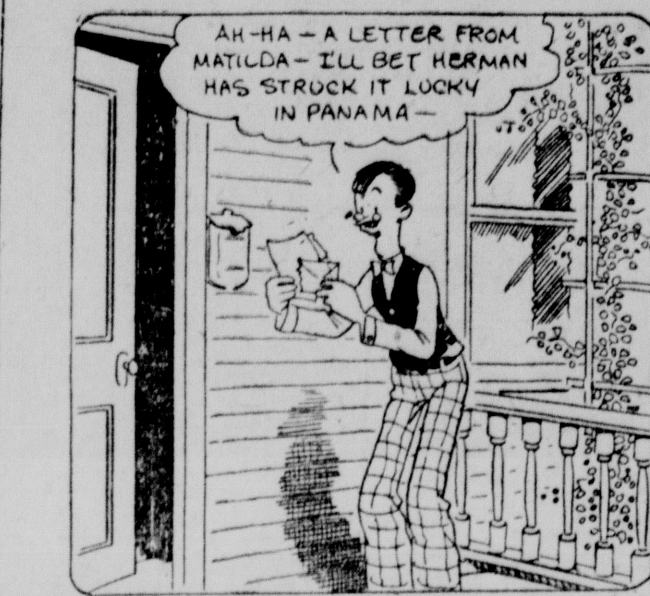

Goaded by the assistant, Hal picked his way over a tangled profusion of legs and duds, and squeezed into a narrow space between two burly citizens, who by way of welcome swore at him for his clumsiness.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JOHN and FAY MILBURN, to whom a baby girl has just been born, buy a home of their own when the advertising agency, in which John is a partner and copy writer, lands an important contract.

Previous chapters told how John, while Fay was in the hospital, met NELL ORME at a party and was attracted by her beauty and puzzled to hear from PAT FORBES, his host, that Nell was having trouble with her husband, Forbes, who has a wife and three children, hints that he is dissatisfied with his own marriage.

DR. DICK MENEFFEE, John's best friend, gets married to MARGARET WAYNE, and Margaret's younger sister, CLARA, runs away and marries CLIFTON LANE, whom John cordially dislikes.

John works late one evening and chances to encounter ELEANOR MASON, whom he takes to dinner. Fay hears about it through a neighbor, and there is a quarrel.

Christmas comes and both of them are very lonely at being away from their people in Washington. There are several visitors during the day, including the DONALD VAUGHANS, whose life, John explains to Fay when they had gone, was more or less a tragedy because they wanted children badly and were unable to have them.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

(The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XIX

"I GUESS we're pretty lucky, at that, aren't we?" said John, turning to Fay. "What would we do without her?"

"I don't know. I don't know," Fay bent over the crib and picked up Judith in her arms and squeezed her close to her breast.

"Now aren't you ashamed of your self for talking the way you do about people being lucky not to be tied down with children? Aren't you?" John was grinning.

"Indeed I am," Fay was evading from side to side and Judith was enjoying it. Addressing Judith, she said, "Was your mama mean to you, huh? Was she?"

John bent over and pinched Judith's cheek. "I'll have to take your mother in hand Judy."

He turned again to Fay. "I feel better now," he said. "Don't feel so lonesome and so darned homesick. Maybe it's the egg nog." He patted his stomach fondly.

A week or so later there was an invitation to dinner from Pat and Marian Forbes.

"Not a party, Fay," Marian laughed over the phone. "Just you and John. Can you come—tomorrow night?"

Fay got in touch with the girl who sometimes minded Judith and then phoned her acceptance to Marian. That evening she met the Ormes for the first time.

Pat was in good spirits at dinner. "Thought I'd have to do something to celebrate," he remarked jovially. "Got a nice raise this week." He added, winking at John, "Bought a bottle of red pre-war stuff. Boy, it'll knock your eyes out."

"I don't want to go blind," laughed John.

"Never fear," said Pat, and proceeded with the carving of the steak. "Just think," Marian said a little later, "this is the first time you've been over here, Fay, since your baby was born. How time does fly! How long has it been?"

Fay answered, "Well, Judith is a little more than six months old."

"Where did you leave your summer place?" John asked Pat.

"Oh, long 'bout the middle of October," Pat answered.

"I'm crazy to see it," said Fay later, and John, after Fay had been "A fine lot of bolsheviks you are!" sneered Noel Boyd.

"John spoke of having such a nice time out there at your swimming party."

"Great," commented John, busy with his steak. "Say, Pat, what's become of that guy Fry—and Smith? Golly, those boys were cards!"

"They live around the corner," Pat told him. "The whole gang of us live within a block—the Ormes, too."

"Oh, yes," and John's tone had a studied carelessness, "how's the Ormes?"

Forbes shrugged. "All right, I guess. Haven't seen them for a month, I suppose it is." He looked at his watch. "Seven thirty," he announced, and walked into the next room and started tinkering with a "WAPQ's on with a great concert, starting at seven thirty. 'Scuse me for leaving the table."

He took his seat again, and a burst of music came from the radio. "Great, isn't it?" and Pat wagged his head in satisfaction. "Got a radio, John?"

"Nope. I'm waiting till they get the darned things perfected. Trouble is, you buy one today and inside of a month the darned thing is obsolete. I can wait."

"You'll have to get one, John," said Fay, "when Judith gets old enough to want one."

"Plenty of time, Fay, plenty of time," John said.

"By that time," put in Forbes with a malicious grin, "there might be one or two more."

"Pat" reproved his wife.

"What's the matter, Marian?" John asked in feigned surprise. "Pat meant there would be one or two more changes in radio, didn't you, Pat?" He winked.

"Sure," said Pat in an aggrieved tone. "I'm always getting blamed for something around this house."

Marian rose. "We can dance a little later, if you care to," she said, leading the way into the living room, and her husband disappeared to return a moment later with a whisky bottle.

"Well, you a little highball, Fay?" he asked, and she answered "Nothing for me, thanks," and Marian said, "Nor for me."

"All right," said Forbes. "As for me and John, I wouldn't think of sullying this stuff with ginger ale. Say when, John."

The Ormes came in a half hour later, and John, after Fay had been

John, "I like Mrs. Orme very much. We'll have to have them out some time."

"Pretty nice people," he agreed. "What did you think of him?"

"Oh—I don't know. He's very quiet, isn't he? I think she's beautiful. She has lots of poise."

"Oh-huh," he grunted.

They were beginning to find themselves in the midst of quite a social whirl. There were several other dinner invitations during the weeks that followed, and then there came a bid from the Noel Boyds to their "Parlor Bolshevik Party," as the written invitations expressed it.

"What do they mean by Parlor Bolshevik Party?" asked Fay. "Does it mean the men must have long hair and the women short? And must we wear old clothes? I'm afraid I'll have to call up and ask Marian Forbes. She knows them better than we do."

"Knowing the Boyds," said John impatiently, "you know they just had to be different. Ordinary invitation wouldn't do. I wouldn't pay any attention to it, if I were you. If they really wanted it a costume party they'd have said so. I'll tell you what—let's go in evening clothes."

They did—and so, they found, did all the other guests.

"A fine lot of bolsheviks you are!" sneered Noel Boyd. Himself he wore a dinner coat with no vest, a white silk shirt, a black Windsor tie and a black velvet tam-o'-shanter.

"You said Parlor Bolsheviks, Noel," laughed Pat Forbes, an immaculate little figure in his dinner clothes. "Hello, Vera, I see you haven't any of your husband's crazy notions."

Vera, in a green, tight-fitting gown, was an exotic figure with her black hair, unbobbed and drawn back smoothly, and her pale face. She made some smiling reply to Pat and at once took hold of John's arm.

"You've been avoiding me," she accused, and led him to a quiet corner. "Do you know everybody here?"

"Well, there are quite a few I do, I recall—John began, but she cut him short. "Oh, you'll bump into them presently."

There was punch in a huge bowl off in a corner, and there John, in quest of drinks for Vera and himself, met a man named York and a young, dapper sort of a girl whose name he was not quite sure of but which sounded like Cecil.

Eleanor Mason was there, too, and it seemed to John that when she encountered Pat Forbes she was a little stiff and distant.

He spoke of this to Vera. "Oh, hadn't you heard?" she asked, and when he told her he hadn't she suggested

9 Reasons for World Leadership

Prove These 9 Points of MAYTAG Supremacy at Home

Wash with a MAYTAG FREE

LET us send you a Maytag. Do a week's washing at our expense and without obligation of any kind. Let the Maytag prove that it washes a tubful of clothes in 3 to 7 minutes. That it washes the most delicate fabrics as gently as by hand. That it washes greasy work-clothes and grimy play-clothes clean as new.

Let it prove that the satin-smooth, cast-aluminum tub keeps water hot for an entire washing. That the tub cleans itself in 30 seconds after the washing is done. That it is easily adjusted to your height and the height of the rinsing tubs.

Let it prove its superiority and greater washability in your own home. Remember, if the Maytag does not sell itself, don't keep it.

Profits and the People

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is an organization which belongs to the people. Fifty thousand stockholders own the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) and not one of them—or any group of them—holds more than 5 1/4% of the total stock.

For the owners of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) are not distinguished by unusual wealth or power. They are just ordinary people, remarkable only for their thrift and a particular pride in the big business that they own.

The three largest stockholders in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) are the Rockefeller Foundation, the Employees, and the General Education Board.

In other words, the three most important stock holding influences in the Company are: a philanthropic organization to promote the welfare of the people, a huge working force of 15,325 employees, and an organization to advance education in all its phases.

All the people of our country are benefited indirectly by the work of the General Education Board, which has for its purpose "the promotion of education within the United States of America without distinction of race, sex, or creed."

Wherever there has been need of any kind—for money—for encouragement—for new suggestions—for the solving of particular problems—wherever there has been a chance to help in the great work of education in America—the General Education Board, a stockholder in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana), has given of its best.

As a consequence of its work, educational institutions in America have been able to take their place among the leaders of the world.

Thousands of people receive the profits of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) directly, in the form of dividends, but unnumbered thousands receive the benefits of Standard Oil Company (Indiana) profits indirectly, through such organizations as the General Education Board.

That these profits and dividends endure is due to skillful management, keen foresight and persevering effort on the part of this splendid organization of 29,000 employees, who believe in the age-old principle of fairness, justice and equity to all.
